

Enjoy an outing through beautiful countryside

The Wey & Arun Canal is ideal for canoeists, kayakers and paddleboarders who enjoy quiet waters in a rural location.

The restored canal in West Sussex runs through beautiful countryside, from near Billingshurst, through Loxwood, and up towards the Surrey border.

There are landing stages and various access points along this stretch of the waterway.

British Canoeing members can use the 3½-mile navigable section of Loxwood Link and other sections which become available as restoration progresses, without charge.

For others, a day licence costs £5 and an annual licence £15. Special rates are available for Scout and Guide groups. Please e-mail us for details (see below).

Licence fees can be paid by card via our website or in person at Loxwood Canal Centre. Conditions apply.

Join our friendly Arun flotilla

The Wey & Arun Canal Trust organises an annual small boats rally on the upper reaches of the Arun.

This annual event celebrates the long tradition of boats navigating a river which was once part of an inland route from London to the South Coast.

If you are interested in taking part, or joining one of our other rallies, they are detailed on our website.

Where to launch on the Loxwood Link

We welcome canoes, kayaks, paddleboards and other unpowered craft to the fully navigable canal section at Loxwood in West Sussex.

So that congestion and clashes with events on the canal can be avoided, all users, especially groups, should contact us at least 24 hours before their visit.

Please be aware that our trip boats run on the Loxwood Link. Please contact our Canal Centre (01403 753999) to check what trips are operating.
